

Be very careful if a prospective business partner you meet through the Internet informs you that they can only send you payment by check or credit card. If you accept such payment methods there is a risk that the checks have been forged or that the credit card numbers have been stolen. Wire transfers and letters of credit issued from a bank or licensed financial institutions are free of such risks in securing payment.